Re: Central Texas Technology Center FY 2015-16 Funding

Date: September 29, 2015

The City of Seguin and the Seguin Economic Development Corporation partner annually with the City of New Braunfels to support the operations of the Central Texas Technology Center (CTTC). CTTC was established to address regional workforce development needs in the region.

Attached you will find a funding resolution for $71,000 from Alamo Colleges for the continued annual funding of the Central Texas Technology Center Manufacturing Technology Academy. This funding is provided by the Seguin Economic Development Corporation to support the continued operation of the Manufacturing Technology Academy that provides training for junior and senior high school students in a manufacturing trade while also earning a college credit. The Seguin Economic Development Corporation included this funding as part of their FY 2015-16 budget and approved the expenditure at their September board meeting. Since the expense is in excess of $50,000, City Council must approve the expenditure before it can be processed.
